Re: Layout Change – 2098 Elliott Bridge Road Bunnlevel, NC

To Whom It May Concern:

Due to an unforeseen structural beam preventing the contractor from installing an opening in a wall, the layout of the upstairs restroom area has changed slightly. A wall that led into the original restroom was brought out roughly 2'7". This change will allow for access to a shut-off valve for the shower and will provide an area for shelving within the space. The existing kitchen is being used as a second restroom, but no walls or doors are affected with this change.

JCE uses the generally accepted practices and principles of the profession. JCE expresses its opinion based on visual observation of the current condition of the structure in this area of the building as it relates to the condition as it was originally constructed. If any other conditions other than those assumed by this report are discovered, the recommendations of this report will no longer be valid until the conditions are reviewed and changes verified in writing.
