Final Report of the Commission

1. Introduction

The Commission was established in 1994 to investigate the causes of the economic crisis in the country and to recommend measures to prevent a recurrence of such a crisis.

2. The Economic Crisis

The economic crisis was characterized by a sharp decline in GDP, a high rate of inflation, and a large current account deficit. The crisis was caused by a combination of factors, including a decline in export demand, a loss of confidence in the government, and a failure to implement sound economic policies.

The Commission found that the government's policies were largely responsible for the crisis. In particular, the government's failure to implement a sound monetary policy, its excessive borrowing, and its failure to reform the public sector were major factors in the crisis.

The Commission also found that the private sector was largely responsible for the crisis. In particular, the private sector's failure to invest in new technologies, its failure to export, and its failure to reform were major factors in the crisis.

3. Recommendations

The Commission recommends that the government should implement a sound monetary policy, reduce its borrowing, and reform the public sector. It also recommends that the private sector should invest in new technologies, export, and reform.

The Commission also recommends that the government should improve its economic management, increase its transparency, and strengthen its institutions. It also recommends that the private sector should improve its economic management, increase its transparency, and strengthen its institutions.

The Commission also recommends that the government should improve its economic management, increase its transparency, and strengthen its institutions. It also recommends that the private sector should improve its economic management, increase its transparency, and strengthen its institutions.
